MARRIED LIFE ON $80 A MONTH

An evening out proves to be helpful to the Suter's who return home a little more cheerful. Mr. Suter realizes that he has become silent and morose at home and notices the change in his wife under pleasant circumstances.

"It is of no use to try, really; the harder I try the less I succeed," Molly Suter gazed in despair out of the window. "I fought all night and firmly resolved not to say anything to John about seeing him out with that stenographer. Having so resolved, I immediately proceeded to make the worst possible scene, and John was too furious to eat his dinner and left the house in a towering rage. He has hardly spoken to me since."

"Don't be so hard on yourself, Molly dear. You were not yourself that day. No one can cry all night and expect to be able to act sanely and calmly the next day. Rub your bruises, get up and go on." Olive Ellison smiled encouragingly.

A scornful smile was her only answer. Olive was busy trying to devise some means of cheering the forlorn little woman and so did not reply.

"I have the consolation of knowing I was right in my suspicions, if it can be called a consolation to have your husband tell you in so many words that he prefers other company to yours," Molly's tone was very bitter.

"Remember, he was angry. You, of all people, ought to be able to make allowance for what people say in anger. You know they often regret their words and would like to unsay them."

"Now, I believe the thing to do is to forget your trouble as much as possible. You have got to get out of the slough of despond; no woman is attractive when she is so blue that her gloom colors the whole landscape."

"Here comes the doctor. Get your things on and we will go for a little ride, and you must positively refuse to think of a trouble all the way. Jack is as happy as a king when he is riding. He watches for the doctor with his cunning little face wedged in between the bars of the gate whenever he is in the yard." Olive bustled around to get ready.

"The doctor is so good to him; I surely appreciate his kindness," said Molly fervently.

"Why can't you and your husband come over here this evening? We could have a game of cards and some lively chatter, and you would go away feeling like a new creature. Would he come, do you think?"

"Somebody besides me asked him 'he might.' Molly visibly brightened at the prospect of a little pleasure. They were strangers in town and she had made few acquaintances.

The doctor's auto stopped in front of the Suter home soon after John returned from the office, and he gladly accepted the invitation. "My wife needs to get out; it will do her good," he said. He was almost as much in need of cheering as was Molly.

Molly brightened under the influence of her jolly companions. Her laughter rang out, and John stared in amazement at the transformation of happiness made in her. He was not aware that he was showing an unusual side to Molly. He had become silent and morose at home.

The doctor took them home in the auto, for little Jack was asleep and he would not allow them to awake him. Molly wondered with a palpitation how John would act when they were left alone together. He had been so changed that evening. She hurried little Jack into bed, hushing his fretful cry while she listened to her husband's movements about the house. Was this the beginning of better things for them, or would he release into his moody aversion? She determined to make every effort to keep the atmosphere free from any irritation if it were possible to do it.

SOAP FOR SCOURING.

A soap especially good for carpets and paints is made as follows: Two bars of ivory soap, shaved in one gallon of water, four ounces borax.

sixteen ounces salsoda, four ounces pulverized fuller's earth. Boil all together, remove from the stove and add a gallon of water and half pint of alcohol.

TO SAVE GAS.

When baking rice pudding, escaloped potatoes, baked macaroni, or anything which requires a long time to bake, start it to boil on the top of the stove before putting it in the oven. It will bake in half the time and save gas.

BOUDOIR CAP.

A square of allover lace could be utilized for a boudoir cap, made in an extremely simple way. Either hem the lace all around with a narrow hem, or roll the edge and saw Valenciennes lace around it. Then fold the lace into a couple of plaits on each side of the center of one side, draw the extra fullness to the back and sew a butterfly bow across it. Ribbon violets or rosebuds should be sewed over the plaits at the side.

BODY OF HORTON HAS BEEN CLAIMED

Salt Lake, Nov. 3.—"I loved Roy Horton and some day I might have been his wife. Now that he is gone I come to claim the body in the name of his father, Charles W. Horton, who lives in Penn Yan, N. Y. It is his wish that Roy be buried here."

Heavily veiled to conceal her identity and apparently afraid of the prying eyes of the public, a young woman appeared at the S. M. Taylor & Co. undertaking rooms late yesterday afternoon and in the foregoing words laid claim to the body of Roy J. Horton, who was killed last Saturday night by Major H. P. Myton on West Second South street.

Declines to Give Name. The young woman addressed herself to the funeral director for the Taylor company. When asked her name she refused to divulge it, but told the director that she would return within a day or two to make

OVERLAND ROUTE IS THE PIONEER ROUTE OF TRAVEL

Under the caption of "The Origin of the Overland Route," the latest issue of the Union Pacific Monthly Bulletin carries the following:

The route of Union Pacific from Omaha was made by the buffalo, next used by the Indians, then by the fur traders, next by the Mormons, and then by the overland immigrants to California and Oregon.

From Chicago or Omaha to San Francisco Union Pacific is over two hundred miles shorter than any other line. Union Pacific has no sharp curves, no heavy grades, and does not follow a roundabout course to the Pacific coast.

Double track 765 miles out of 1,000, Omaha to Ogden, considerably more than any other line west of the Missouri river.

Union Pacific is the only route to Denver, Salt Lake, San Francisco, Portland, Tacoma and Seattle protected every inch of the way to these cities with automatic electric block safety signals.

The entire main line of Union Pacific system from Omaha to Denver, Ogden, Salt Lake, Portland, Tacoma and Seattle is protected by these automatic signals, which should be distinguished from manual "block signals," operated by hand at stations often many miles apart.

Union Pacific might have saved millions of dollars had we been satisfied with merely "block signals."

The only line double track all the way from Council Bluffs and Omaha to Colorado is Union Pacific.

The same publication carries the following clipping from the Chicago Evening Post, which may be of interest:

Nothing more remarkable in the line of concerted effort than the efficiency of the "Safety First" campaign has come into American notice of late years, we are unable to recall it.

Here, now, comes the Union Pacific, which carried 9,351,364 passengers in the fiscal year ending June 30 without the loss of a single life. This includes not only passengers on trains, but passengers getting off and on the line.

The report of the interstate commerce commission will give the Union Pacific an absolutely clean bill of health in its fulfillment of its duty to the safety of its millions of passengers.

It is only a few years ago that the railroad men of England, when compared with the superiority of the American railroads in many respects, would shake their heads and point gravely to the immense loss of life on our roads. The challenge was at length taken up by our railroads.

Since then, simply by the will to do it, great rail systems many times as large as anything in England have been able to bring in a record of "not one passenger killed."

This marvelous feat was accomplished first by the intelligent direction of the situation by the directing minds amongst our carriers. But the high officials themselves are the first to say that the real credit belongs to the working employees. These men in thousands of positions have welcomed with a man's eagerness the responsibility limited in "Safety First" reports have lived up to it. America should be proud of them."

It is a notable fact that this is the first time anything of the kind has ever been shown in photoplays. "Mortmain," tonight and tomorrow at The Ogden.

POSSE SEARCHES FOR A GUNMAN

Casper, Wyo., Nov. 2.—With his chance for recovery said to be one in one thousand, Job Gantz, 33 years of age, who was shot by "Shorty" Russell, aged 37 years, at Salt Creek late Saturday night, says that if he gets well he will not be a witness against Russell, as he considers himself chiefly responsible for the quarrel which culminated in the shooting.

Russell took to the hills immediately after the fight and is still at large. Gantz, who has the reputation of being quarrelsome, and Russell, whose reputation has been excellent, had been drinking when they attended a dance at Salt Creek, forty miles north, Saturday evening. They quarreled in the dance hall and were put out of the hall, but were permitted to remain in an ante-room. There their quarrel was renewed, and Gantz is said to have attacked Russell, who defended himself with a pistol. He shot Gantz twice, once in the abdomen, the bullet making twelve punctures in the intestines and lodging in the hip and in the neck, this bullet ranging downward and lodging in the shoulder. The third shot failed to hit. A .25-caliber automatic was the weapon used.

Soon after the shooting, which occurred just before midnight, Gantz was placed in an automobile and brought to Casper where Dr. Lathrop performed an operation. Several feet of intestines were removed in a desperate effort to save the wounded man's life. He still is conscious.

No trace of Russell has been found by the posse which is scouring the hills for him. Sympathy at Salt Creek, appears to be with the fugitive, because of a general realization of Gantz's quarrelsome disposition. Gantz has been employed by the Stock Oil company and Russell has been doing oil-claim assessment work for John Nolan.

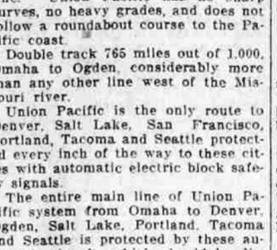

Twenty-five surgeons of New York witnessed the operation in "Mortmain" and pronounced it marvelous. Robert Edeon plays "Mortmain," tonight and tomorrow at The Ogden.

MESSINGER BOY IS INJURED BY AN AUTO
Salt Lake, Nov. 3.—Edward Thompson, 16 years of age, a messenger boy, was severely injured yesterday morning when he was knocked from his bicycle by an automobile driven by Fred Matthews, a public chauffeur, who had been hired to operate his car in the interest of R. P. Morris, one of the candidates for mayor. The boy was rushed to the police emergency hospital, where it was found he had suffered severe scalp wounds.

Prof. Sigmund Stark operated on "Mortmain" and the operation was a complete success. See this great play at The Ogden tonight and tomorrow.

FIGHTING IN THE CLIFF OF DEATH

London, Nov. 2.—An account given by a wounded Hungarian officer of the fighting around Krn, quoted by the Morning Post's Budapest correspondent, says:

Day and night saw most desperate hand-to-hand encounters in this plateau, called the "cliff of death" by the men, Austrians and Italians alike. The positions are 7000 feet high on the summits of the mountains, far

RUSSIANS ARE ON AGGRESSIVE

Petrograd, Nov. 2, via London, Nov. 3, 3:24 a. m.—The official communication issued today follows:

"In Galicia, southeast of Tamopol, we crossed Lake Ickikov. Disembarking at night on the enemy's side of the lake, we penetrated several lines of barbed wire defenses and attacked the enemy, breaking into his trenches and bayoneting a large part of the Austro-German defenders. We took about 400 prisoners.

"On the Stripa river near the village of Semikovitza at the south end of Lake Ickikov, the fighting continues.

"On Monday we took by assault the village of Bakovitz, south of Semikovitza, and also the forest of Bakovitz. The Austro-German prisoners taken in the fighting on Sunday and Monday numbered eighty officers and 3500 men.

"Caucasus front: Advance guard skirmishes have occurred along the Black sea coast between the Arkhava river and the confluence of the Rivers Tehoruk and Ohi. On a more distant line from the Tehoruk to Lake Tortum and Kalajid mountain, northeast of the town of Hassankala, there have been successful reconnaissances.

"Engagements have occurred with the Kurds in the region of Ardjich, on the north side of Lake Van.

"Western front: The fighting which began October 13 near Kemern (20 miles west of Riga) continues without appreciable result to either side. Near Ichin, on the western extremity of Lake Babit, the enemy attacked simultaneously with his offensive against Kemern and at first had success, but we re-established our former position by a counter-attack.

ONE NEED IN TUBERCULOSIS

is careful attention to hygienic living and proper diet. Science is agreed that fresh air, rest and avoidance of food excesses constitute the most effective non-medical treatment in this widespread disease.

Often, however, these measures need supplementing by proper medication. The system lacks sufficient resistance to overcome the attack, and something must be done to assist in upbuilding the patient's strength.

In many cases of this sort Eckman's Alternative has been used with marked success. Its efficacy in this disease has borne fruit in a record of numerous apparent recoveries, and where a tonic is indicated, it has produced most beneficial results.

Since it contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, it is safe to try. At your druggist's or direct from
